

'Jersey Boy' actor to lead Morris Columbus Day parade

Dominic Scaglione Jr., who portrays Frankie Valli in the musical "Jersey Boys," will be the grand marshal at this year's Morris County Columbus Day Parade.

"Last year we had the cake boss, this year we got one of the Jersey Boys," parade Chairman Joe De Fillippes said, referring to "Cake Boss" TV star Buddy Valastro, who was grand marshal last year. "That's Italian, and that's how we try to do it."

The seventh annual parade, which is sponsored by the East Hanover Italian American Club, will be start at 2 p.m. Oct. 9 on Ridgedale Avenue in East Hanover. Lisa Marie Latino of Long Shot Productions will serve as the parade master of ceremonies, according to a news release about the event.

"Every year we get a little bit bigger," DeFillippes said. "We've been trying to get high school bands to participate, and this year we're getting Hanover Park, Whippany Park and Parsippany. That's going to be a plus for us. From what I understand Whippany Park's got 150 kids in their marching band."

Scaglione is best known for portraying Valli, but he also has appeared on "The Oprah Winfrey Show" and was chosen to sing Valli's songs at the New Jersey Hall of Fame induction ceremonies.
